

Move For Area Special Police Force

Plymouth Is First To Approve

A special countywide inter-departmental police force of 100 men and a top level committee to coordinate crime prevention and law enforcement are being developed in Wayne County.

The special police force, set up on a similar basis to Detroit's Tactical Mobile Unit, was proposed by Sheriff Peter L. Buback and endorsed in a meeting of Police chiefs and others representing 40 departments.

Buback asked each police department to make available one or two men for this special force, depending on the department's size. He said Detroit's TMU and the Michigan State Police would be asked to give the force special training in controlling disturbances.

The sheriff proposed that an additional 100 men be made available for mobilization in the event of "dire emergencies" such as major natural disasters.

One of the first governmental units to take official action in backing the project was the City Commission of Plymouth which voted Monday to support the plan.

Plymouth which voted 5-3 in favor of the plan, was represented at the meeting by L. Roger Robert Corbitt, Jr. in Monday's meeting, City Manager Richard Blodgett told of the meeting and recommended that Plymouth become part of the plan. The Commission approved.

MEANWHILE, representatives of a dozen agencies met at the invitation of Mel Ravitz, chairman of the County Board of Supervisors, and agreed to form a Coordinating Committee on Crime in Wayne County.

They agreed to meet monthly to exchange information and ideas on how to eliminate causes of crime in the metropolitan area and how to make law enforcement more effective.

Those who met with Ravitz included:

Hubert Locke, administrative assistant to the Detroit Police Commissioner; Prosecuting Attorney William L. Cahalan; Sheriff Peter L. Buback; Dr. William Wattenberg, an assistant superintendent of the Detroit public schools; and William A. Shuck, superintendent of the Wayne County Intermediate School District.

Other agencies represented included the Detroit and Wayne County anti-poverty programs, Wayne County legal services for the poor, and several committees of the County Board of Supervisors.

Those present voted unanimously to continue the meetings. The next meeting was scheduled for 2 p.m. July 13, in the supervisor's office at the City-County Building.

In his meeting with the police chiefs, the sheriff said the special police task force would serve as a deterrent against rowdism.

He said his proposal was inspired when several department police departments and the sheriff's department pooled a total of 200 men to head off weekend rowdism by motorcycle gangs along the Edward Hines Parkway.

Buback said it had been reported that as many as 800 motorcycleists planned to descend on the County Parkway, but only 35 or so showed up—apparently because word of the police preparations had spread. There were no incidents, he said.

The police department representatives agreed to present Buback's plan to their local mayors and city councils. Buback also asked the police chiefs to consider contributing men to form a countywide inter-departmental racket squad.

Schoolcraft Advances Closer To Full NCA Accreditation

Schoolcraft College recently moved a step closer to full accreditation by the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools when the college submitted a 193-page self-study—the result of a year-long project required as part of the accreditation process.

The self-study critically examines every major phase of the college from its basic philosophy to its financial resources, its strengths and outlines efforts being made by the college to correct unresolved problems.

Largely a project undertaken by the college faculty, the self-study involved every segment of the college staff. The study was developed by seven major committees, directly involving some 50 faculty members. Completion of the self-study places Schoolcraft on the threshold of the final phase of the NCA accreditation process.

If all remaining hurdles are cleared, the college, now completing its third year of operations, could achieve full accreditation next March, according to John H. Brinn, vice-president for instruction and director of the self-study.

Schoolcraft has been accredited by the Michigan Commission on College Accreditation since 1964, and last year was admitted as a candidate for accreditation by the NCA.

In addition, the college meets all accreditation requirements imposed by the U.S. Office of Education for eligibility for various federal grants.

"In a very real sense," Brinn explained, "Schoolcraft was accredited the moment it opened its doors to accept students for the first time in August, 1964."

"Our credits have always been accepted for transfer by every four-year institution in Michigan and we do not have a single instance in which a Schoolcraft graduate was denied admission to a four-year institution when his scholastic record here met the entrance requirements of the senior college."

"We are, however, extremely desirous of full accreditation by the NCA at the earliest possible time. The North Central Assn. is the sole regional accrediting organization, and its recognition will place Schoolcraft on a parity with every other accredited institution in the nation.

"While there are a number of steps that must still be taken, we are confident of attaining accreditation from the NCA next spring."

"If this is the case, Schoolcraft will have achieved accreditation in the shortest time possible under the requirements of the North Central Assn."

Brinn outlined these steps which remain in the accreditation process:

The self-study will be examined by the NCA official board for a decision by early August. If the self-study is accepted by the board without reservation, an examining team will be appointed to visit the college for a first-hand look.

If, however, the board raises questions on the self-study, the college will have the option of pursuing the accreditation effort or of deferring it for the time being.

An inspection team, named by the association, would visit the campus sometime during December or January and would submit a report and a recommendation as to accreditation to the NCA in February.

The college would receive a copy of the team's report, but the recommendation would be confidential to the North Central board.

A final decision as to accreditation would be made by the NCA during its annual meeting in March.

CHARLES WEBER

Crowley's Names Manager

Charles Weber, a Crowley's employee for 16 years and a native-born Detroit, is the new manager of Crowley's Livonia Mall store. He assumed his new duties a week ago after his transfer from the Grand River store.

Weber, who started 16 years ago as a packer and then moved into the candy kitchen, assistant buyer in millinery, assistant buyer in women's coats, area supervisor of ladies wear at the Westborn store, assistant manager at Grand River, buyer of women's coats, merchandising manager of women's sportswear, and then manager of Grand River for two and half years, has done nothing but advance since he joined Crowley's.

Born in Detroit's far east side, Weber received his high school diploma from St. Mary's of Redford High and then attended Wayne State University. It was while attending Wayne that he became associated with Crowley's and has been with the chain ever since.

He and his wife, Janet, are the parents of five sons.

Observer Names Advertising Chief

R. A. (Rudy) Mazurosky, Association and the Newspaper Executive Association, has joined the six Observer Newspapers as advertising director.

The appointment was announced by Publisher Philip H. Power, who said Mazurosky will be in charge of all advertising for the six newspaper groups. Mazurosky replaces Frank McGuire, who has formed his own advertising agency in Farmington.

Mazurosky previously was assistant classified advertising manager of the New York World Journal Tribune, the merged afternoon newspaper which discontinued publication last month.

A native of Portland, Ore., Mazurosky attended San Francisco State College and served in the U.S. Army in Europe from 1953-55.

He then joined the San Francisco News-Call Bulletin and had risen to manager of the classified advertising department by the time he left in 1964.

Mazurosky then went to the New York World Telegram & Sun as classified manager, he was the youngest advertising executive retained when that paper merged with the Herald-Tribune and Journal-American last year.

He is a member of the American Newspaper Classified Advertising Managers' Association.
