Eight Concerts Set On U of D Schedule

Eight concerts, ranging from popular to symphonic music to folk ballet, are scheduled for the University of Detroit Town and Gown 1967-68 season.

The series opens Friday, Oct. 13, with Roger Williams, his piano and orchestra, a soloist and a quartet. The Williams show is currently edging into Billboard's top rating as the most-booked act on the college circuit.

Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Tokyo-based Yomiuri Nippon Symphony Saturday, Oct. 11, presenting pure, classical music in the first half of the program with a second half of "Mr. Pops" favorites.

A memorial performance for the late poet, "Dylan Thomas Growing Up," will star Emily Williams in his widely praised performance, a one-man entertainment comprised of the works of the famous Welsh poet on Friday, Nov. 17.

Friday, Dec. 1, Detroiters will have their first opportunity to view William Mooney, a 27-year-old actor who gets laughs with skits and sketches of American situation humor based on early American writers.

Ed Ames, a versatile performer who has achieved star status in two separate careers as actor and as singer, will come to U. of D. with the Peter Palmer Orchestra, Friday, Jan. 19.

A change of pace brings in the dancers of the American Folk Ballet on Sunday, March 3, a zesty company of 50 singers, dancers and instrumentalists in a spectacularly staged production in the tradition of "Oklahoma."
