

Plymouth Sets Six Symphony Concerts

The Plymouth Symphony, only major adult orchestra in the western suburbs, will offer six Sunday afternoon concerts for the 1967-68 season.

Each will have a different soloist or theme. All are free with the exception of a Christmas season opera performance for which a small charge will be made.

The Sunday concerts will begin at 4 p.m. in the Plymouth High School auditorium. Conductor is Wayne Dunlap.

The dates, programs and soloists are:

OCT. 15—Soloist will be Mischa Mischa-koff, Detroit Symphony concertmaster, playing Beethoven's violin concerto. The orchestra will perform Hindemith's "Symphonic Metamorphoses of Themes by Carl Maria von Weber" and Dvorak's "Symphony No. 8 in G Major."

The Russian-born Mischa-koff, 70, is scheduled to retire from the Detroit Symphony at the end of the season. He came to Detroit when the orchestra was reorganized under Paul Paray. He had previously been concertmaster of the New York, NBC, Philadelphia and Chicago symphonies.

NOV. 18—Violinist Paul Doktor will be featured performing Telemann's "Concerto in G Major for Viola and Orchestra" and Berlioz's "Harold in Italy." The orchestra will perform "A Solemn Music and a Joyful Fugue" by Virgil Thompson.

A pioneer for the viola as a virtuoso solo instrument, the Vienna-born Doktor made his American debut in 1947 and has performed from Alaska to Salzburg. Master of a variety of styles, he is at home with baroque, classical and modern repertoires—and is a master teacher.

DEC. 10—Humperdinck's opera "Hansel and Gretel" will be performed in full—with sets, costumes, company and orchestra. This is the only program for which there will be a charge—$1 for adults, 50 cents for children—with tickets available at the door.

Featured will be the Detroit-based Piccolo Opera Company. The Plymouth Symphony has performed "Hansel and Gretel" in the past, but never with a professional cast.

JAN. 28—A "family concert" has been designed to appeal to all members of the family. The program will be lighter and shorter. Twin themes will be the late poet-author Carl Sandburg and music inspired by paintings or drawings.

On the program will be Cindy, from "Kentucky Mountain Portraits" by Mitchell; Rootabaga Suite, based on Sandburg's "Rootabaga Stories" by Wynn York, an Olivet College faculty member; "Studies on Themes of Paul Klee" by Gunther Schuller; and the classic "Pictures from an Exhibition" by Mussorgsky and Ravel.

MARCH 10—Verdi's "Requiem" will be sung by the Kenneth Jewell Choral, accompanied by the orchestra.

The chorale is composed of southeastern Michigan residents and is supported in part by the new State Council for the Arts. Its idea was born, and it was organized, in Plymouth.

APRIL 28—This Conductor Dunlap calls the "heroic summing up." On the program are Mozart's overture to "The Marriage of Figaro," Rachmaninoff's second piano concerto and Schubert's seventh symphony.

Soloist in the piano concerto will be Benning Dexter, head of the piano department in the University of Michigan's School of Music.

With 95 musicians from Plymouth and 21 other communities, the Plymouth Symphony is in its 22nd year. Conductor Dunlap is a member of the Schoolcraft College faculty.

Two members are also members of the Detroit Symphony, and six are on the University of Michigan faculty. Two have played with the Chicago Symphony, one with the New York Philharmonic and two with the Kansas City Philharmonic.

The orchestra is supported by memberships in the Plymouth Symphony Society, the yeoman service of the Plymouth Symphony League, the Plymouth Community Fund and local business and industry.

A Country-Side Now Bustles

The complexion of what was recently a sleepy country-side is being rapidly changed in the area southwest of I-96 and 10 Mile Road, in Farmington Township.

The land is being filled by Farmington Freeway Industrial Park, an entirely pre-planned business community developed by Thompson-Brown Co.

Already opened, a-building or in the planning stage are plants for HML Industries, H. M. White, Inc., Kehach Corp., Solar Industries, Barget Mold & Die Co., Electro-Mac, Dow Furnace, Teletrans Corp., Stanley Carter Co., Ace Controls, M & H Tool Co., Whitlock, Inc., and Jensen, Inc.

At the northeast corner will be a service area—with plans for a 100-unit motel, restaurant, heliport, industrial medical clinic, gasoline station and car wash. It's particularly attractive to firms which warehouse and distribute throughout the state, say the developers, because it's on I-96, close to I-696 and near the right-of-way of the proposed north-south I-275. (Aerial photo by Ralph Evert.)

Coho Salmon A Boon To Fishing, Business

When a fish outgrows an angler's imagination, that's news! And some Coho salmon, which have grown from four inches to over 20 pounds in two years, are creating Michigan's biggest fish story since anglers from all over the world came here to catch grayling in the late 1960's.

Even confirmed prevaricators (commonly known among fellow rodsman as liars) are letting their Coho catches do the talking.

THE COHO salmon may provide a three-way gift to the state, according to Automobile Club of Michigan.

Many Great Lakes resorts suffered a 10 to 20 per cent drop in business this summer when anglers died and washed ashore. Coho, which thrive on alewives, may check this situation.

Coho will restore interest in Great Lakes game fishing destroyed when the lamprey nearly exterminated lake trout.

The usually dormant tourism period between Labor Day and the opening of deer season will come alive. Communities near the Manistee and Pigeon Rivers, the two most popular Coho areas at this time, report more week-end business than they are able to handle. Motels, restaurants, boat liveries plus sporting goods and hardware stores, are jammed.

Manistee businessmen are labeling the economic effects of the Coho season as greater than that generated by the ski season.

THE BIGGEST Coho to date have been caught in Lake Michigan about three to five miles out from the mouths of the Pigeon and Manistee Rivers. "Since this is the first season for Coho fishing in Michigan, now along they will be hitting in the lake before starting river spawning runs is uncertain," states Jerry E. Fisher, Auto Club's touring manager.

Some of the salmon planted a year ago (they are now two years old) are in harbors off the mouths of spawning streams. A few of the jacks have already started ascending rivers and streams located on the accompanying Automobile Club of Michigan map.

After spawning, the normal three-year life span of this Pacific salmon ends, and the Coho dies.

COHOS WERE transplanted into Michigan waters from the Pacific Ocean. Plants were made here in April, 1966. Eggs were hatched in Michigan and the fish were released when four-to-six inches long.

Streams used for planting two years ago on the west side of the Lower Peninsula were the Pigeon and Big Manistee Rivers and Big Bear Creek (a tributary of the Big Manistee). In the Upper Peninsula, salmon were released in the Huron River which empties into Lake Superior near Skanee.
