

CONSERVATION DEPARTMENT men carefully pour buckets of young rainbow trout into Phoenix Lake on Northville Road.

7,000 Rainbows-- A Lake Of Gold

Wayne County has a trout lake--at least for a couple of years.

Seven thousand young rainbow trout were planted in Phoenix Lake north of Plymouth by the State Conservation Department late last week.

The lake is formed by the damming of the Middle Rouge River. It's located on Northville Road.

The trout are about four to five inches long now. Jim Cenc, Conservation Department officer, said many would be legal size--seven inches--by the opening of trout season next April 27.

You'd better have a trout stamp on your license, too, the officer warned.

BUT PHOENIX will be a trout lake only for a couple of years, more or less, he added.

The water is too warm and the bottom too salty for trout to reproduce. They're being stocked only as a temporary measure.

Next fall, he said, bass and bluegills, which can survive, will be planted as the lake's permanent stock. Gradually, they will take over.

Several weeks ago, the Wayne County Road Commission drained the lake practically dry and poisoned all the fish.

Those fish were mostly carp, goldfish and suckers along with a few surprisingly big largemouth bass and a scattering of bluegills.

Cenc said the trout will be able to move up the Rouge stream as far as Waterford Dam.

WATCHING THE planting with a sort of paternal pride were members of the Plymouth Jaycees, who, with local Boy Scouts, have conducted clean-up operations to remove junk from along the Rouge.

Between cleanup and stocking, the Rouge in general will still have trouble supporting trout. The problems are dual: (1) pollution, which consumes oxygen in the water that trout need, and (2) storm water, which is warm and can't dissolve the amount of oxygen trout require.

MOST OF THE 7,000 trout planted last week were this size--four to five inches long.

Schoolcraft Center

Secondary Vocational Study Is Broad-Based

Two committees will help the Schoolcraft College Board of Trustees plan the implementation of a so-called "secondary area vocational center."

Purpose of such a center would be to serve the vocational needs of post-high school students.

It could also serve high school students by dropouts, if member districts are interested in having the college perform that function. Member of the college district are the school districts of Livonia, Plymouth, Garden City, Clarenceville and Northville.

The college board recently outlined the study plan and set up two committees--executive and citizens.

president; Harold Fischer, board chairman; John Brinn, college vice president; Kenneth Lindner, college vice president in charge of business affairs; and Jon Adams, dean of technical vocational instruction.

The 35-member "blue ribbon" committee would consist of seven from each of the five participating communities.

The function of the executive committee would be to establish the scope of the study and timetable for executive; select and appoint the citizens advisory committee members; develop recommendations for financing and implementation; recommend policy guidelines for administration in the operation of the center; and formulate the final report to the governing boards based on advisory and executive committee recommendations.

Nov. 21-22-First meeting of the executive committee.

Nov. 26-First meeting of the citizens committee.

December-Study work by both committees.

Jan. 1-10-First progress reports.

March-Final report and recommendations after four months of study.

April-Action on recommendations by governing boards.

August-Implementation on a pilot basis.

ABILITY to maintain the confidence of "diverse groups"--something of an understatement, considering current politics--is mandatory for survival.

A spokesman for the selection committee said a man with city managing, regional planning, or regional authority background would be a likely applicant.

A city manager with experience in intergovernmental cooperative arrangements, and with an ability to deal with conservatives and liberals, would seem to have an edge.

He need not necessarily be a Michigander, although obviously a man who knows Michigan's constitution, law and politics has a clear edge.

So if you're a sort of municipal superman and diplomat, there may be a job waiting for you that can pay from $27,500 to $35,000 a year.

THE PROPOSED TIME schedule, which the college administration hopes to meet, is as follows:

Nov. 20-Local boards to accept the college offer to serve and agree to participate in a feasibility study.

Nov. 20-School superintendents to submit nominations for the Citizens Advisory Committee.

Nov. 20-Local boards to accept the college offer to serve and agree to participate in a feasibility study.

Nov. 20-School superintendents to submit nominations for the Citizens Advisory Committee.

$27,500 For A Municipal Superman

By TIM RICHARD
Sunday Editor

If you're a sort of municipal superman and diplomat, there may be a job waiting for you that can pay from $27,500 to $35,000.

It's a brand new job, and the bosses are taking their time doing the hiring.

So far, some 30 men have applied for the post-executive director of the fledgling South-eastern Michigan Council of Governments.

KNOWN to headline writers as "COG," the organization covers the counties, cities, townships, villages and school districts in the six counties of southeastern Michigan. It currently has 70 members.

(A State Senate-passed bill would deny membership to school districts, but as COG is presently organized, schools may still join.)

COG's enemies consider it, among other things, a step toward an undefined bogey called "metro government." COG's supporters argue that it is an association that will seek solutions to regional problems such as air and water pollution, unit purchasing, and planning.

COG is the product of a group called the Committee of 100, who in turn were stimulated by studies sponsored by an urban affairs foundation called Metropolitan Fund, Inc.

If you want to apply for the executive director's job, you would write to MFI at One Woodward Ave., Detroit. An MFI staffer there collects the applications for a five-member selection committee of COG leaders.

WHAT KIND of man is COG seeking?

Farmington Runner 4th

Larry Williams of Farmington High placed fourth in the state high school Class A cross country meet at Ypsilanti last Saturday.

He followed Bob Carpenter of Jackson Parkside, Rick Gross of Grosse Pointe and Greg Barrett of St. Joseph across the finish line.

Of the area teams, Redford Union placed tenth with 247.

MEDICINE IN HISTORY--Examining a state historical marker designating the first site of Detroit Medical College are (from left) Brian Dates, of Farmington, a Wayne State University student who heads the student centennial commission; William Chapoton, of Livonia, construction superintendent of Professional Plaza, in what is now the Detroit Medical Center; and Victor J. Schrem, project administrator for the architectural firm of Crane & Gorwic, which planned the medical center and designed the plaza.
