Charity Gifts Are Deductible

Contributions to charitable organizations may be deducted on 1907 Federal income taxreturns by individuals itemizing deductions.

To be deductible, the contribution must have leen made to a qualified organization before the end of the taxable year, explained A.M. Steepler, District Director of Internal Review of the State of Michigan, Qualifying organizations include Religious organizations and schools operated by religious organizations, however,

IN ADDITION to glifs to religious organizations, Stoepler said, deductible contributions include donations to domestic charitable, scientific, or literary organizations for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals. Stoepler also, cautioned in-payments which in fact represent tuition for a tampaser's, to children attenting such school and not constitute deductible confliptutions whether the tuition paid to the Church or the school.

IN ADDITION to glitts for religious organizations, Slosepier said, deductible contributions include donatons to domestic and the form or admission privileges, or other benefits.

Gifts of property such as furniture or clothing are de-ductible in the amount of the fair market value of the prop-erty at the time of the contrithe value of personal services performed for qualified organization cannot be deducted. Deductible, however, are out-of-pocket expenses paid in rendering uncompensated services for a qualified organization, tenditate as ganization, including the pur-chase price and upkeep of a uniform, transportation ex-penses, and the cost of meals or lodging while away from-home overnight on behalf of the organization.
