I did it; I found the answer to all the world's problems, and I found it in a book so less! The only hitch is that it is one of those things that is more easily read than applied. The words were put down in the form of a poem and go like this: The morning the world began The Lion growled a growl at Man.

And I suspect the Lion might (if he'd been closer) have tried a bite.

I think that's as it ought to be And not as it was taught to me. I think the Lion has a right To growl a growl and bite a bite.

And if the Lion bothered Adam He should have growled right back at 'im.

The way to treat a Lion right Is growl for growl and bite for bite.

True, the Lion is better fit For biting than for being bit. But if you look him in the eye You'll find the Lion's rather shy.

He really wants someone to pet him: his teeth won't let him.

The trouble is: his teeth won't let him. He has a heart of gold beneath world around us. It is true that many people do not understand us, but then do we give them a chance. Or are we more than quick to flash our teeth and scare them off as it were?

As for the other direction, it does take effort to see beyond the "teeth" of the other person. But if we can bring ourselves to do it we may well find the heart of gold that we never suspected was there at all. If we were to change the word "teeth" to words that we hear and the things we see so often have more than meets the eye or the ear, and that something else, if not beautiful, is at least understandable. And even if we can understand, life would be less marred with growls that are heard.

MUSIC FOR PLYMOUTH — The Women's Glee Club of Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky., will present a concert of sacred and secular music Saturday, March 16, in the Plymouth Wesleyan Methodist Church, 42290 Five Mile. The concert, which includes music ranging from the 16th century to the 20th century, will begin at 7:30 p.m. and is open to the public.
