

Warn Parents To Take Care Of All Drugs

Lansing - Half of the one million accidental poisonings in the United States involve children under five years of age. The Michigan Department of Public Health reported that 7,417 children in this age group were poisoned in the State in 1966.

Aspirin - and these are not restricted to the baby type - are the largest single item reported in cases of accidental ingestions. Parents should pay particular attention to the storage of this product, locking them up when not in use and not taking them in front of children.

A statistical analysis of ingestion experience reported to the National Clearinghouse for Poison Control Centers, 1966, indicated a decrease in poisonings by household products, but increased medicine ingestions, as a child approached three years of age.

Interestingly enough, a review of reported clinical cases indicates that children actually were under the supervision of adults in 95% of ingestion incidents. The problem appears that too many parents are unaware of the potential hazards of daily-used products in the home. Also, parents should recognize the relationship between their children's development and the accessibility of various household items.

LT. Governor William Milliken has commended Michigan pharmacists throughout Michigan "for developing and directing public service programs to educate citizens to the hazards of accidental poisonings" in a Poison Prevention Week Proclamation.

"FAMILY HEALTH AND Safety" is the theme of this year's Poison Prevention Week observance by the Michigan State Pharmaceutical Association, March 17-23. A survey of four major Poison Control Centers, located in different parts of the country, indicated that during the last observance of National Poison Prevention Week (1967), there was a sharp increase in telephone inquiries as compared with several weeks before and after.

This may be some measure of effectiveness in alerting the public to the potential hazards of commonly-used products. The best medicine against accidental poisonings is preventive medicine. Vaccines can protect children against such diseases as smallpox, influenza, polio, and even mumps. Parents, however, must protect their children against accidents.

FOR FAMILY HEALTH AND Safety, pharmacists remind you:

-Always keep medicines, poison substances and household chemicals out of the reach of children, preferably in a locked cabinet when not in use.

-Store all medicines, poisonous substances and household chemicals separately and in their original, tightly sealed containers.

-Never store non-edible substances in empty food or beverage containers.

-Always read all labels, following directions and caution statements carefully.

-Use prescription medications only for the patient for whom they were ordered.

-Always refer to medicine by its proper name - not "candy".

-Clean out medicine cabinets regularly, especially prescription medications no longer required.

-Dispose of medicines and household products by flushing unused portions down the drain and rinsing container before discarding.

-Know which substances are dangerous - even many common plants and berries are poisonous.

Enrollment Up

ANN ARBOR-- Enrollment increases in Michigan colleges and universities have exceeded the national average by 62 per cent in the last four years, according to The University of Michigan's Office of Institutional Research.

Undersecretary of Health, Education, and Welfare Arthur Cohen, who is on leave from the U-M faculty, recently announced that college and university enrollments had gone up 45 per cent between fall 1963 and fall 1967.

New Plymouth Store Has Unusual Service

Don Wrigley and Fred Hill are two young businessmen in Plymouth who have visions of becoming great successes. They just may do that.

Starting Thursday, Friday and Saturday they are going to have the grand opening of their new men's and boy's clothing store on Main St. in Plymouth directly across from Plymouth Rock in Kellogg Park.

The shop appropriately enough for Plymouth is named John Smith.

BOTH FRED AND DON, who were with the purchasing department of a metropolitan store, claim they went into business for themselves to try out their own ideas--of which one is very unique.

They call it buying clothing by appointment--and that's exactly what anyone can do. Right now they are available for Tuesday evening in a test run.

Hill explained that it is a unique and completely different selling technique in the area. It is based on the fact that a lot of people work too late to get to a store during regular store hours.

Therefore anyone who would like to have a private appointment after the store is closed on Tuesday all they need do is contact one of them and set up a time.
