

U-M Consultant Sees No End To Racial Conflict

DES MOINES, IOWA--Whites and Negroes will continue in conflict because no one gives up power willingly, a University of Michigan consultant to the President's Commission on Civil Disorders said here.

Dr. Nathan S. Caplan, who studied conditions in riot-torn Newark and Detroit, said that the Negro will continue to struggle for human rights and social justice.

Whether that struggle will be peaceful depends on whether society recognizes "the almost untapped human resources in the black community for the good of all" and whether ways can be found for whites and Negroes to "survive in conflict while simultaneously working together toward the achievement of constructive goals."

WE MUST DEVELOP--and quickly--a tolerance for conflict, including riots, Caplan said.

The Negro cannot be kept in a "no win" situation, he explained, because riots have changed the country permanently.

"Riots have made it obvious that this country, which has permitted racism for so long, can no longer depend upon racism to control, and by that I mean suppress, the desire of the American Negro for full participation in society."

Caplan, a program associate in the University of Michigan's Institute for Social Research
