

Stately Delphinium Give Garden Splendor

By BETTY FRANKL
Special Writer

Tall spikes of delphinium bring stately beauty to the garden. The new Pacific and English hybrids which often reach above five feet tall have a drama and majesty that is enhanced by the richness of their colors.

These range from clear white through delicate pastel blues to lavenders, violets, indigos and true sky blues.

They are incredibly lovely and create an unforgettable scene when combined with pink-toned roses, or with blazing orange lilies or pure white Madonna lilies.

The original wild prototypes of the lovely garden hybrid delphiniums were found growing in high altitudes with a cool climate. If this is kept in mind it is easier to meet the conditions under which delphinium grow best.

They need lots of sunshine, but need a cool, moist soil.

Add Vines To Create Memories

Romance, nostalgia, "back home" memories, happiness—these are the thoughts associated with vines.

Novelists have their lovers strolling beneath the clusters of purple Wisteria, or basking in the fragrance of the Jasmine. Old grads love to return to the "ivy-covered walls," and what child has not consumed a morsel of adventure along with Jack on his bean stalk?

As a group, vines offer some of the most interesting and dramatic displays we could want in a landscape. The saucer-sized and brilliantly colored flowers of the Clematis are equal in beauty to anything from our annual or perennial border.

An interesting flower shape is found on the Aristolochia. The yellowish-green tubular bloom resembles a necktie, hence the common name Dutchman's Pipe.

WHO COULD MISTAKE the nearness of a Honeysuckle when it is in full bloom and perfuming the entire surroundings? Some vines give us flowers when it is just needed in our garden, particularly late summer. The orange and scarlet flowers of the Trumpet vine appear then, as do the white heads of the Hydrangea. Pasteflower, vines, grace southern gardens. Individual parts of this spectacular bloom, according to legend, are said to represent the instruments of the Crucifixion.

"OLD-FASHIONED" VINES also have a definite use in today's modern landscape setting. When creating a landscape plan, you may cover a blank wall with a vine as the background for a flower border or soften the harsh corners of a straight-line architecture with the greenness of a climbing plant.

He will also consider vines as perfect covers for certain elements that are out of place in the garden picture. A steel or wire boundary fence is an example, as are hard-to-remove tree trunks and boulders.

In addition to beauty, nature has provided vines with some most ingenious mechanisms so they can climb on their supports. Some vines-called "clingers"—will send out little strand-like tendrils with sticky pads or tiny roots at the end. As soon as they touch a wall, brick or tree trunk, they will grasp on as if glued.

Builders Praised

Efforts of the National Association of Home Builders in behalf of improved housing for all American families has drawn a commendation from the President of the United States.

In a statement prepared for the spring meeting of NABH's Board of Directors President Johnson lauded NABH's "positive, affirmative steps to bring the full force of a great industry to bear upon the immediate housing needs of the Nation," and recognized NABH as a "rallying point" for the effort to provide decent housing for all Americans.

Drop-Off Spot

Near the back door, build a garden bench of fir 2x4s. You'll find it also makes a handy serving counter, workbench, and drop-things off spot for the patio.

Sensitive Plant Is Shock Proof

Sensitive Plant is a wonder of the botanical world. If you touch a single leaflet, it will immediately fold up.

Successive leaflets along the stem will also fold and the entire branch will bend down toward the base of the plant. Left alone the plant will recover and become fully sensitive again.

Repeated stimulation does not harm the plant. The plant will recover from shock in a minute or so, but will not become fully sensitive again for a few hours.

It is also suitable for indoor winter use as a house plant. A perennial in its native climate, Sensitive Plant is grown as an annual here.

YOU CAN enjoy this unusual plant. Start a Punch 'n Gro planter kit already planted with Sensitive Plant. The kits contain seeds evenly spaced at the right depth for best germination and growth.

The Sensitive Plant seeds have been specially treated to speed germination.

Already fertilized and with a special soil mixture, the kits are found at most supermarkets and variety stores. Instructions for starting the kit and transplanting out of doors are included.

Pesticide Bill In Effect

Stronger pesticide controls sponsored by the Michigan Department of Agriculture, were signed into law recently by Governor George Romney. Two separate bills give the agency increased control over commercial pesticide applicators and power to restrict use of pesticides and other chemicals known as "economic poisons."

Governor Romney asked for immediate effect for an amendment (H. B. 3976) concerning registration of economic poisons.

This gives the state agricultural department full authority to deny registration of a pesticide in Michigan. Previously the law required that chemical firms be allowed to register under protest, even if denied registration by the agricultural department.

Director B. Dale Ball of the Michigan Department of Agriculture said that registration of such chemicals may be denied under the amended law.
