"For every right there is also a responsibility"

Rights are very important in our democracy.

Responsibilities, however, are also important.

Our courts today have emhasized the rights of an individual . . . this is good.

However, they must always retain sight of an individual's responsibility ... this is most important.

I believe that rights and responsibilities must be given equal consideration under the law.

A good judge must not only recognize rights under the law, he must concern himself with teaching responsibility to the law.

If the people of this community of Farmington give me the opportunity, I, as your Judge, will give equal attention to the rights and responsibil-
