WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

one-for the failure to divert more gasplants to planting feed grain. PRESIDENTIAL PIQUE

President Truman's pique and an economist's desire to throw off the new deal label are back of the administration's tragic failure to clamp on price controls six months ago.

This never-told story starts last year when the elder statesman, Bernard Baruch, publicly came out for price controls.

Real truth was that the White House and national security council board were at that very time toying with the same idea. But when Mr. Truman heard that the white-haired New York financier was for price controls, he to yered himself. The President had put Baruch on his "S.O.B. list" when Baruch refused to serve on a Democratic committee in the 1948 election, and Truman didn't want to be in the position of coming out for price controls just after Baruch did.

Another factor was the strong opposition to controls by Leon Keyserling, then acting chairman of the council of economic advisers. Keyserling, a former department of agriculture economist and assistant to Sen. Bob Wagner, was being attacked by Right Wingers on capitol hill as a wild-eyed radical.

Keyserling, an able economist but subject to human ambitions, wanted to be named chairman of the council and gain acceptance as a middle-of-the-road advisor. And at that time he told both the President and Stuart Symington, chairman of the resources board, that controls were "unworkable".

In one consultation with Symington, Keyserling argued that high prices would, in fact, be helpful by draining off excess purchasing power and its competition for goods, services and materials needed for rearmament.

WASHINGTON PIPELINE

Illustrating the Washington card game here is another I heard recently: "Drew Pearson has now sold out to Pan American always. He got a free trip to Europe with Pan American and is now in their pocket." ... Real fact is that I paid my way to Europe on Pan American as I have on every other airline. However, I do not hesitate to pay tribute to Pan American's efficient operation across the Atlantic.
