Old Masters in Needlepoint Bring New Beauty to Home

Rich beauty is given the home by famous paintings reproduced in needlepoint. "Blue Boy" from the painting by Sir Thomas Gainsborough, and "Pinkie" from the painting by Sir Thomas Lawrence, pair well for wall area above a table.

Figures Embroidered by Experts, But You Can Work Out Background

ART isn't necessarily something that's to be viewed only on rare visits to museums. It becomes more meaningful if it's something that's lived with, that has a part in the familiar pattern of life.

Few people can afford original paintings by great masters, but that's no reason for shutting yourself out from these classics. Reproductions are the answer.

One well-known firm, recognizing the desire of many people to hang copies of the world's best paintings in their homes, has recently introduced an "old masters" series in needlepoint.

THERE'S appeal in this series not only to the artistic leanings of homemakers, but also to their creative instincts. Although the central figures of such paintings as "Pinkie," "Blue Boy," "Age of Innocence" and "Boy With Rabbit" have already been worked on canvas by skilled Madeira craftsmen, the background is left to be finished by purchasers.

"Old Masters" kits are available in two sizes—full-length and miniature. The larger kits include antique gold or mahogany picture frames. The smaller ones include, in addition to the frames, mats, glass panes, and enough yarn to complete the backgrounds.

The large pictures are planned to be used in pairs; the miniatures, it's suggested, are attractive when hung in groups of four.

COUNTY AGENT GIVES TIPS ON HOME SAFETY

Falls are the number one cause of fatal accidents in Michigan homes, says Mrs. Josephine Lawver, county home demonstration agent. Falls on stairways are the most frequent cause of accidental deaths in homes, especially among people 65 years and older.

Word from Olevia C. Meyer, extension specialist in home management at Michigan State College, says that the older age groups are most susceptible to falls. In 1949, according to the Michigan State Department of Health, 963 deaths for all ages were caused by falls in Michigan homes. Of these, 781 or 86% occurred on stairways. Seventy-one per cent of those who died as a result of falls on stairs were people over 65 years of age.

Ten simple rules, if strictly followed, can reduce stairway falls, Mrs. Meyer believes.

1. Provide a good, sturdy hand rail on all stairways, and teach people to use them.

2. Be sure there is good light full length on all stairways with out glare in the eyes.

3. Place two-way switches at the top and bottom of the stairway to light your way as you go.

4. Finish steps in light colors to make them easier to see.

5. Keep steps and step coverings in good repair at all times.

6. Remember stairways are not intended for storage.

7. Keep steps clear of small objects such as burned matches, cigarette butts, bobby pins, buttons and marbles.

8. Avoid the use of wax and other

Picnic Foods Must Be Protected, Says State Food Handling Expert

If you can't keep your picnic foods cool, or you can't keep them not, then don't keep them long!

Food poisoning from improperly prepared and improperly refrigerated picnic foods make scores of Michigan people seriously ill each summer. Dr. Max Decker, food handling consultant, Division of Engineering, Michigan Department of Health, said in issuing the above warning.

Food poisoning is caused by the growth of germs in food. The germs get into the food from unclean hands, towels, sandwich or meat boards, dishes, meat grinders, or can openers; from flies, mice or roaches; or from coughs or sneezes in the kitchen.

Once the food has been contaminated, heating it or refrigerating it will not make it safe. Picnic foods which are particularly dangerous when not refrigerated are soft foods made with milk or eggs; any foods made with mayonnaise or salad dressing, gravies, cream fillings.

Slippery finishes on steps.

9. Small throw rugs should not be used at the head and foot of stairways.

10. Teach children and other members of the family to observe these rules.
