specialist at Michigan Sitate College, told Michigan swine producers today,
"The suckling and weading periods are very critical and it is during this time that most runts develop. Since antibiotics are not cheap it is a matter of good ecotomics as to whether or not they should be fed during the entire growing and fattening period.
"If, it is advantageous to get the most rapid gains and get the pigs to market early, then you may want to feed antibiotics all the way." Dr. Hoefer said.
