Good weather plus the Monday holiday rule helped bring Huron-Clinton parks the highest three-day totals in three years during busy weekends when over 374,954 visitors came to HCMA parks in 1971, compared to 265,261 in 1970 and 308,093 in 1969.

Metropolitan Beach, a 550-acre site near Mt. Clemens on Lake St. Clair, had 75,100 visitors for the holiday weekend in 1971, compared to 51,800 in 1970 and 64,800 in 1969.

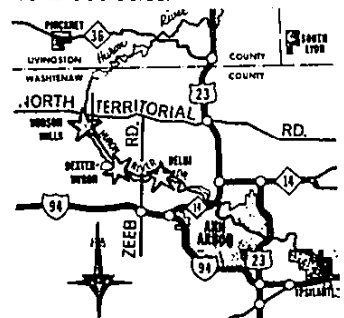

STONY CREEK Metropolitan Park, covering 3,900 acres near Utica and Rochester, had 84,400 visitors for the holiday weekend in 1971, compared to 62,300 in 1970 and 75,700 in 1969.

Kensington Metropolitan Park, a 4,300-acre site near Milford, had 104,400 visitors for the three-day weekend in 1971, compared to 75,700 in 1970 and 99,400 in 1969.

Lower Huron Metropolitan Park, covering 1,200 acres near Belleville, had 72,000 visitors for the three-day weekend in 1971, compared to 52,900 in 1970 and 48,350 in 1969.

Willow Metropolitan Park, a 1,500-acre site under development near New Boston and Willow, had 3,760 visitors in 1971 and no figures were available in 1970 since it was not yet open.

Delhi, Dexter-Huron and Hudson Mills Metropolitan Parks, located from five to 12 miles northwest of Ann Arbor along the Huron River, had a combined total of 35,924 visitors in 1971 for the three-day holiday weekend. Comparative figures for these parks were 22,761 in 1970 and 19,843 in 1969. These parks range from 45 to 900 acres.
