

Gazebos Are Easy To Make

GAZEBOS are making a comeback. They can be a place to sit, eat, or even sleep out at night.

Do you need a gazebo in your garden? Are the bugs chasing you out? Do you beat a hasty retreat at nightfall, leaving the garden to the moths and mosquitoes?

If so, perhaps you need a gazebo. No, this is not some sort of predatory animal, but a little garden house. In years past, people used to construct little roofed shelters in their garden. They called them summer houses or gazebos.

Somewhat they went out of style. Now, though, screened summer houses are making a comeback. A screened gazebo may be just the thing to increase the use of your garden many times over.

READY-MADE screen houses can be purchased for not too great a sum. These are round, rectangular or octagonal in shape and are the size of a small room. They can be installed easily and quickly.

If you desire, you can construct your own -- if you are a home handy-man. Then it can be made any size or shape.

Furnish it with some gaily colored waterproof cushions and a low table, and it will take on the air of a Japanese pavilion. Or use conventional patio furniture to suit the family needs.

The screened gazebo can be a delightful place for summer lounging or entertaining. It will serve the family well for dining and even as a cool sleeping area!
