

'Music Under Stars' Series Begins June 15

James Frazier, a Detroit who achieved international renown last fall as the first native-born American to conduct the Leningrad Philharmonic, returns to his home town of Detroit this Thursday (June 15) to open the 20th consecutive season of free Michigan State Fairgrounds concerts by the Detroit Symphony Orchestra.

His program will include music by Debussy, Beethoven, Tchaikovsky, and Strauss' tone-poem "Don Juan," a work Frazier conducted in the Soviet Union.

EIGHT CONCERTS will be presented in this year's "Music Under the Stars" series, Thursday through Sunday evenings, June 15-16 and 22-25. All start at 8 at the Fairgrounds Music Shell located near Woodward Avenue and Eight Mile Road.

The widely-varied programs will feature three conductors, five instrumental soloists, and two vocalists, including both local and visiting artists.

The other two conductors of the series are regular conductors with the Detroit

Symphony Orchestra, associate conductor Pierre H&u, who will make his first appearance at Friday evening's concert, and conductor-in-residence Paul Freeman, who will direct the concert on Saturday evening.

Sunday evening's concert will again be conducted by H&u.

Featured soloists for the opening week will be Thomas Bacon, French horn player with the orchestra, who will be heard in the Horn Concert No. 1 by Richard Strauss on Friday; Ruth Burezyk, pianist from Grosse Pointe, to be heard on Saturday.

featured in the Liszt "Hungarian Fantasia" on Saturday; and Rosemary Russell, soprano, a professor of voice at the University of Michigan, who will be heard in operatic favorites Sunday.

The following week's concert, June 22-25, will feature debut performances by two pianists, Edward Thomas, a professor of music at Bethel College in St. Paul, Minn., who will be heard on Thursday, and Ted Joselson, a student No. 1 by Richard Strauss on Friday; Ruth Burezyk, pianist from Grosse Pointe, to be heard on Saturday.

APPEARING AT other concerts will be two local musicians, soprano Onita Sanders on June 25 and violinist Gordon Staples, the orchestra's concertmaster, on June 23.

The free concert series is sponsored by the National Endowment for the Arts, the Michigan State Fair Authority and the Detroit Symphony Orchestra.

Entry to the parking lot is through Fairgrounds Gate on Woodward Avenue just south of Eight Mile Road. Parking fee is 50 cents.
