

'Enlightened' Kitchen For Beauty

When you turn on your kitchen lights, do they "turn" and for the eye you on"? Or off? The properly lit kitchen, function. The typical kitchen, however, falls short of potentials on both counts. To help you tell whether your kitchen is suitably "enlightened," "Light for Living Centers," showroom associates of the American Home Lighting Institute, suggest the following quiz:

1. Does your kitchen have a bright and cheerful look, instead of drab and dark?
2. Do the lighting fixtures add to the decor with their own interest of design, materials and colors?
3. Can you read the markings on a measuring cup or spoon at range or work counter, without moving to a window or light?

4. Do you often have to wash dishes or tableware a second time?
5. In reading a recipe, do you have trouble judging the color of food to tell whether it's done?
6. Do you have trouble looking into the decorative possibilities of up-to-date lighting for your kitchen.

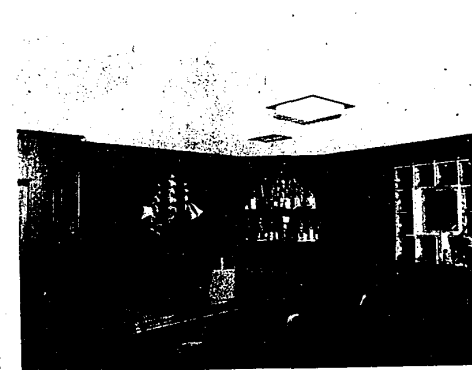

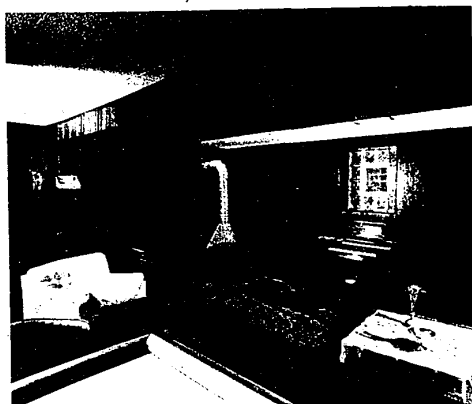

If your answers to the others are "yes," you probably need more and better illumination. Trained lighting consultants at A.H.L.I. "Light for Living Centers" showrooms offer help in diagnosing a kitchen's lighting ills and prescribing remedies that give it vitality in both decor and function.

Current styles of lighting fixtures are available in variety to suit every decorative theme, color plan and budget. Designs range from burnished brass ships lanterns to graceful wrought iron shapes to French provincial chandeliers to American colonial and rustic.

For contemporary tastes, there are clean-lined ceiling rectangles or hanging opal globes. Smoked glass, stained glass, and chrome are among the many decorative options.

For efficiency of illumination, a kitchen should have suitable general lighting, plus task lighting directed to the work counters, sink and range. Light for Living Standards of American Home Lighting Institute provide guidelines for proper number, location, types and wattages of fixtures, on ceiling or wall or under cabinets.

When a kitchen is lighted right for both good looks and good vision, it lightens the work and brightens dispositions.

THIS IS the recreation room that Jack, the journeyman carpenter, built in the basement of his parents' older home with the help of another young bachelor brother. Features are the exotic wall paneling, Brazilian Rosewood, the freestanding fireplace, electronic organ and, showing partially in foreground, a bar. The bachelor carpenter team boxed in overhead conduits, finishing them with paneling that matches the walls. Shag-style carpet squares were laid by the brothers and their parents. The original window area was enlarged and filled with glass brick, with a center section reserved for a louvered window that may be opened for ventilation. Note how the carpenters framed the window with matching paneling and then finished the job handsomely with molding. The acoustical drop ceiling provides outlets for recessed lighting and heating.
