Beware of the shoe that doesn't hurt. It could be crippling your child's feet.

It's a medical fact. The wrong shoes, shoes that are total misfits for your child's feet, won't even hurt. Even while they're doing serious harm — misshaping the bones and ruining the bone structure — you won't know it. Because as one doctor so plainly put it, the crippling process is painless. You see, a child's 26 foot bones are so fragile, so moldable, especially through the first 12 years, that they will merely adapt their shape to a wrong shoe. And they'll grow all wrong until they're firmly mature at 18. By then the damage is long since done. Naturally, the right shoe won't hurt either, and only by knowing how a shoe is constructed can you be sure it's right for your child's feet. That's why we believe in Fleet-Air. They construct shoes to meet the needs of growing feet, for boys and girls, from tots to pre-teens.
