Bank Running In 15th District

By EMORY DANIELS

FARMINGTON
Road improvement and county-wide planning are the key issues raised by Eliot Bank, 37, of Franklin, the Democratic candidate for Oakland County commissioner in the 15th District.

The newly created 15th District includes northwest Southfield area and northeast Farmington Township.

BANK has been president of Quality Container Corp. for 10 years.

He is a graduate accountant from Wayne State University and spent five years in public accounting.

Bank has lived in Franklin Village for the past 18 months and, before that, lived 11 years in Southfield.

This is his first try at elected office, but he has campaigned actively for such Democrats as Prosecutor Thomas Plunkett, Justice John Swainson and Sen. Philip Hart.

THE 15TH District may be predominantly Republican, he admits, but many Republicans are independents who will vote for the best candidate instead of voting straight party.

"Being a Democrat running in the 15th District isn't a handicap. Residents are aware of the issues, and there is a wide divergence of views within the district."

BANK says he comes from a family which has always been active in the communities where they lived.

"Few people realize the commissioners exist, and it is such an important office because of the money spent. County government affects us all, and a better commission can add more benefits to local residents."

"Because of Oakland County's growth, and the fact most residents live in cities, persons identify with their local communities and don't appreciate county government, face and what its overall goal is for the county."

"The biggest part of my campaign has been getting persons to know what the office of county commissioner is."

"Part of the problem is that persons don't relate to county government. But with a commission divided into districts, you don't have an overwhelming number of constituents, and it's possible to get out and inform persons about what is happening by attending subdivision meetings and other organization meetings."

A COMMISSIONER must maintain contacts with local governmental units, Bank asserts.

"I create my own schedule and time isn't a problem. I will devote all the hours needed to the job, including attending commission and committee meetings and contacting local government leaders and residents."

BANK sees party caucuses as unnecessary for conducting commission business.

"An individual astute enough to take all the information available, make up my own mind, and cast my own vote without receiving dictates from any party or group of persons."

AN ELECTED county executive is needed, says Bank, who favors county home rule for more efficient government.

"I'm for decentralization of county services. More county services, such as health services, should be made available at the community level instead of having our residents go to the county headquarters."

Part of the problem with roads is lack of funds, Bank maintains, but another is the head of the road commission.

He serves on the board of "The head of the road commission is so hardened that he is incapable of relating to people anymore."

More money should come from Lansing to Oakland County for roads, Bank adds.

of the Barrel and Drum Assn. of Michigan.

He is a member of the health and welfare committee of the Jewish Welfare Federation.

He was chairman of the Channel 56 building acquisition committee, a member of the Detroit Chamber of Commerce, Economic Club of Detroit, Franklin Village Assn. and member of the reorganization of Smith Street Cemetery committee in Hamtramck.

OAKLAND COUNTY should establish a land use plan for the entire county, he adds.

It would be a county-wide master plan available as a guide towards orderly and logical growth, Bank says, but wouldn't involve rezoning any property.

BANK says he is totally for more shared services.

"Wherever duplication can be eliminated, that is, or

"We are in a cost consciousness era and should minimize expense wherever possible."

The state and federal government establishes guidelines for welfare. Bank stresses, and there is little a commissioner can do to effect welfare reform. "Some want to make welfare reform a county issue, but it is an area of reform which county government cannot realistically accomplish."

"I'm for decentralization of county services. More county services, such as health services, should be made available at the community level instead of having our residents go to the county headquarters."

Part of the problem with roads is lack of funds, Bank maintains, but another is the head of the road commission.

BANK is vice-president of the National Barrel and Drum Assn. and chairman of the Special National Committee on Environmental Problems.

Each donor will receive a free ticket to the North Farmington High School concert on Nov. 17 in the high school auditorium.

Parents and friends of the North Farmington Band will assist in the drive at shopping centers in the North Farmington area.
