

PROPER GLITTER TO SIZE OF TREE...

Lighting Up For Christmas?

Lighting up for Christmas? There are new lamps and lighted ornaments to help decorate indoors in a completely new way. And there are ways of using them that will add charm and warmth in your own individual style.

First, the tree. If you are using standard size Christmas lights, multiply the height of the tree by its width and then by three.

A tree seven feet high and four feet wide needs about 84 lamps (7x4x3=84). Half this amount would be the minimum.

If you use midget plug-in bulbs, you may want to increase this number by at least a half 21 though it's a matter of individual taste. In any case, lights should be put on the tree before any other decorations.

The other ornaments are highlighted most effectively this way and in turn help conceal the cord.

Lighted ornaments featuring midget bulbs will be popular this year. One of these has its tiny bulb centered in a flower-like reflector. Called Satelights, they are available in light sets with a straight-line cord. Another new General Electric light set features Tinsel Lights in which a midget bulb is surrounded by a halo of tinsel. Both new midget types come in solid and assorted colors.

Also new are standard size bulbs with a soft, metallic sheen that produces sparkle and color even before they are lighted. Called Satin Brights, the new bulbs have a special coating that makes them gleam like ornaments.

When lighted, they have a frosty, transparent look. They are available in four-bulb picks as well as in 15-light string sets in red, blue, green and gold. To top off the family tree, there is a new Tinsel Topper, a star-shaped ornament studded with tiny bulbs set in tinsel. The new ornament also is attractive when hung in a window or doorway.

If there is an extra string set or two left after decorating the tree, try stringing them along the staircase or looping them from the mantel, or lighting a small table-top tree for party or buffet occasions.

Outdoors, the possibilities are virtually unlimited. Perhaps the simplest is the floodlighted front door. Hang a large wreath, back it with a sheet of silver or red foil, and watch it sparkle when you turn on a single floodlight. Other tips offered by lighting experts include:

Use floodlights to wash your entire home in soft light in the color of your choice. Or use outdoor string sets to accentuate the architectural beauty of your home.

Transparent lamps in a bare tree have a light and airy look that is a pleasing variation of the more common lighting of fir trees and shrubs.

BAKED HOLIDAY DESSERTS FROM FREEZER TO OVEN

Holiday parties — planned or impromptu — have a way of happening in any home. It may be a teenage record-spinning session, a tree-trimming party or just a holiday get-together. Occasions very but the need for foods — desserts in particular — never varies.

To satisfy the holiday sweet tooth, home economists at Corning Glass Works have created a make-it-yourself cake sundae. This delicious dessert is baked in individual heat-resistant bowls, which is a handy —
