

CONFINEMENT OF CONSUMPTIVES

Dr. Mays Denounces Any Forcible Policy in Tish Direction.

IDEA COMES FROM ITALY
Medico-Political Reformers Concocting Designs to Interfere With Rights of the People—So-Called Campaigns of Education Not Successful.

NEW YORK.—Attack is made upon the crusades against tuberculosis by Dr. Thomas J. Mays, of Philadelphia, in a recent number of the New York Medical Journal.

Dr. Mays denounces the so-called campaigns of education, the white plague circulars, and all the means adopted to call public attention to the spread of this disease.

"In spite of all the changes which have already been noted," he writes, "it became more evident than ever that the campaign of education had signally failed to create an impression upon the course of consumption. As a last resort it is suggested now to enforce a rigid control of the disease in a way that would practically mean the confinement of all consumptives in enclosed institutions, so that they will be unable to disseminate their germs of disease among the well. This is the last horrible culmination of a most desperate movement, which, after causing irreparable injury, will end in greater failure than any of the preceding steps."

"It is a measure which first saw daylight in Italy. That was in an age when knighthood was in flower and when the word of the ruler was law, when the inhabitants of a country were divided into the oppressed and the oppressor; when, under the veil of hypocrisy, rulers guarded the people with an air of fatherly interest in order to make them more dependent and easier to control."

"It is a long stride from 1754 to 1914, so long that it seems that the considerate would have hesitated to go back to that gloomy and distant recess, and excavate sanitary laws and measures which, in effect, were forced upon the people by the medico-political rulers of that day. On account of their indescribable heartlessness they were rejected by a coalition between the people and the medical profession. They are now being foisted upon the free American as new and most useful ideas."

"Thousands and hundreds of thousands have given up their lives in this country, since 1776 for the defense of human liberty and as a shield against every sort of oppression. Let us not close our eyes to the stern reality, that while we are at peace with the outside world we are not without foes who threaten our freedom from within. The medico-political reformers of the present day are just as active in concocting schemes and designs to impose upon the rights of people as they were a century and a half ago."

HE HAD QUITE A ROLL.

And No Thief Had Managed To Get It From Him.
PITTSBURGH, Pa.—The fat, too; three in a row; one, two, three; you you go. Well, that lets Milwaukee out, so I guess I'm going to New York," announced A. Bruggerman of Bayonne, Clinton County, Pa., after a night's cooling down in the Woods Run police station.

He had two railroad tickets, one to Milwaukee and one to New York, that had been found in his clothes when arrested for drunkenness. In the "boast" out New York won, and a few minutes later Bruggerman was at the Pennsylvania station, accompanied by a policeman, who went along to see him off safely.

The policeman's solicitude was not occasioned by any special regard for Bruggerman, but was a result of the latter's prodigality with money, of which he had some $750. When arrested he had $750, most of which he hurled at the patrol wagon driver. Fearing that the next bombardment might be aimed at someone less honest, Magistrate E. F. Dillon sent the policeman with him, after reducing his roll by $5.

DIDN'T KNOW THE NAME.

Peanuts is Peanuts Where Mike Shearn Came From.
WASHINGTON, D. C.—Attorney General Gregory, of Texas, so busy he could not find time to go out for lunch, on, rang for a messenger. Mike Shearn, who has guarded the door of the attorney general's office for a quarter century, responded.

"Take this dime and get me some goobers," said the attorney general.

Mike hastened across the street to a vendor's cart and bought 10 cents' worth of chestnuts.

"I didn't want chestnuts," said the attorney general. "I asked you to get me some peanuts."

"Oh, peanuts was it?" responded Mike. "Sure, I never heard of that name you gave them. Where I come from they call them just peanuts."

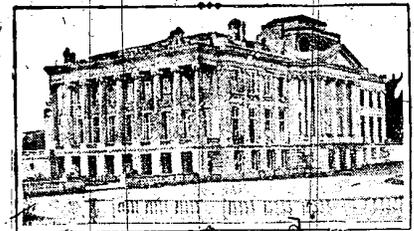

Experience teaches us, above other things, that much of what we find true, we had learned from observation long ago.
