A Change in Business

I have sold my undertaking business in Farmington to Mr. W. E. Heeneey, of Plymouth, and he will take possession on November 15th.

I can say of Mr. Heeneey, that he is thoroughly competent to take up the work, having worked with me for some time in learning the trade and also taken a course in the M. C. Haley School of Embalming, at Detroit, and has studied and worked with the "New Ideas of Embalming," which I have found to be very successful, being able by their use to keep the remains from one to four weeks if necessary, and still have them look natural. Mr. Heeneey will occupy my residence and undertaking rooms, and will keep on hand a stock of from 18 to 20 caskets to select from, not having to take customers to Detroit or select from catalogues a suitable casket.

I would like to see Farmington people patronize Mr. Heeneey when occasion arises for anything in his line, knowing him to be a gentleman, and competent to handle anything you may see fit to give him in the undertaking business.

In selling my business and leaving Farmington to go west, where I expect to teach my "New Ideas of Embalming," I wish to thank the people of Farmington and surrounding country for their patronage and kindness during my residence here, and wish you all happiness and success!

Yours truly,
FRANK P. ZESSAU.

Not much doing last Saturday night in the Holloween line. A number of out buildings were turned over, wood piles carted away, and an old meat cart that stood back of the Enterprise office run up onto Grand River and placed between the Schroeder meat market and John Walters' store. The windows all along the avenue were well soaped up. However, the young folks seemed enjoying themselves hugely during the early part of the evening.

Rev. F. D. Ehle, of Detroit, who has preached in the Baptist church in this village for the past two Sundays, announced last Sunday that he would supply that pulpit every Sunday hereafter at 10:30 central standard time, until further notice. Rev. Ehle was much encouraged with the attendance last Sunday morning, and invites everyone not attending church elsewhere to come out. He hopes to see the church filled in the near future.
