

Circuit golfer claims movie got her started

By MARY CONNELLY

Detroit-area visit, Ms. Sullivan said the biggest problem with playing the labyrinth of professional golf courses is maintaining a marriage at the same time.

Married in July to greeting card publisher Richard A. Anzolt, "Silky" Sullivan said she now plans to put back her activities in professional tournaments.

It was Katherine Hepburn and Spencer Tracy who propelled Ms. Sullivan to turn pro in Atlanta, Ga., in 1969.

Ms. SULLIVAN recalls the influence of the classic screen stars on her life with a story which, almost sounds like a fictitious movie plot itself.

At age sixteen, she happened to see the film "Pat and Mike" in which Hepburn starred as a professional golfer and Tracy played her manager.

That's the reason for Ms. Sullivan being a two-time winner of the Harrisburg city championship, a semi-finalist in the Pennsylvania state championship and the former president of the LPGA.

AFTER SEEING the movie, she became a golf enthusiast, obtained clubs, took lessons and became a pro.

"Maybe if I hadn't seen the movie... Ms. Sullivan mused as her voice trailed off.

But she loves the sport and the tournaments. When traveling, she tries to break the routine of practice and sleep by sightseeing for one afternoon.

OTHERWISE, she said, the cities dotting the map become nothing but a kaleidoscope of hotel rooms and golf courses.

When it comes to playing the tournaments, Ms. Sullivan said the women's professional circuit can offer at least one advantage which the men's rounds cannot.

"Jack Nicklaus swings so fast a spectator can't learn anything," she said. "But the average tempo of a woman pro is about the same as an average male golfer."

BECAUSE OF the reduced speed, spectators can pick up golfing tips at the women's tournaments, she said. Powerful swings and the ability to send a ball farther along the course are areas where male pros will consistently outstrip the women professionals, Ms. Sullivan commented.

She said it would be "demoralizing" to be matched against male pros and consistently out-powered on the course.

ACCORDING TO Ms. Sullivan, the professional women's golf circuit is making strides toward reaching the par of the men's circuit.

With an influx of money from corporations such as Colgate-Palmolive and S & H Green Stamps, she said, purse size was on the upswing and the women's tour seems being upgraded.

This spring, Ms. Sullivan will compete with the women professionals in the Colgate-Dinah Shore Winner's Circle Championship. The $200,000 in prize money is the richest single purse in women's golf history.

"We do have talent," Ms. Sullivan said. "And we do feel we should be paid for what we're worth."

Couples discuss marriage, money

By SANDY TESSLER

Three out of every 10 marriages in the United States today fail. And in 90 percent of these failures, the major contributing factor is poor financial management.

The young engaged couples to whom these statistics were quoted recently already have a better chance at a successful marriage than their peers. They had taken advantage of the presentation, "So You're Getting Married," offered by the Oakland and Macomb County Cooperative Extension Services of Michigan State University.

Guest speaker, Al Abraham, a credit counselor for Credit Counseling Centers of Michigan told a group meeting at Oakland Mall, Troy, "The sad thing is that money management should have been taught to you in school and was not. Also your families are reluctant to discuss their financial problems with you. All of a sudden, you're an adult, you're married, you have responsibilities.

"THE BEGINNING of your marriage is the one time when conservatism is of prime importance. Remember the statistics (on those marriages that fail). If you don't make sound decisions now, you're going to pay for it," he warned.

Abraham discussed budget expenditures and asked each couple to evaluate priorities, from 12 categories including housing, food, car, insurance, personal, clothing, gifts, education, donations, entertainment and savings.

CANADIAN FURS WHY?

1. It is an established fact that the finest fur in the world come from Canada.
2. The reason you should buy Canadian furs at Gervais in Windsor is due to the fact that Mr. Gervais is a stylist and manufacturer since 1935.
3. Our prices are much lower due to buying pelts at the auction level thus eliminating the skin dealer and manufacturer.

Our garments have the custom made look because they are custom made.

You will find a vast selection of young furs priced from $199.00... say nothing of our fabulous mink, chinchilla and Russian tables.
