Color coding: key for fall

Color coding will be the key to fall dressing. As long as you get the proper color, you will be well coordinated by matching shoes, stockings, skirts, shirts, hats and gloves.

The one color look in wardrobes, recently shown by Saks Fifth Avenue at a benefit luncheon for the Meadow Brook Music Festival, focuses on shades of deep green, creamy camel, soft grey and rich burgundy. Black and white enter with evening apparel. And, rust and beige still remain unshaken as popular fall colors.

However, that expansive color wheel doesn't mean mixing primary colors with secondary colors. It means a wide choice of single-toned wardrobes.

The specifics of the season include big sweaters, trimmed with fur and worn over hugging turtle-necks. Pair the sweater with a big skirt or a modified version of the big skirt or a pair of slenderizing, uncuffed pants.

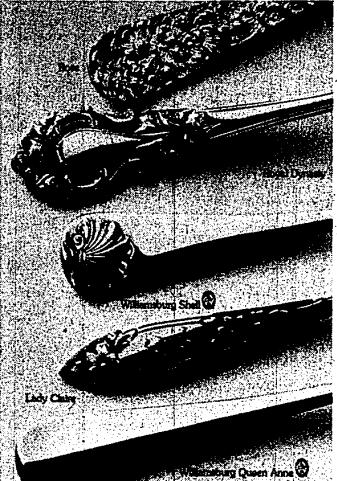

If two sweaters aren't enticing, combine the big sweater with a shiny shirt. Tie a scarf at the neck for a touch of color and wrap another long scarf under the collar of the sweater. The look is reminiscent of layers but more precisely matched.

To keep warm on cool days, nothing but a flowing cape-like coat will suffice. Button it high at the neck, slip on an unconstructed beret and twirl on a lengthy muffler.

See-through overjackets are important for fall evenings.
