

Lace sweeps over the shoulder of uncomplicated knit design (Photographed by Lona Askins)

Adolfo's airy lace sleeves add glamour to evening knits

Adolfo pairs lace and knit

Lace and knit seem about as compatible as the mini-skirt and this season's fashions. But Adolfo, New York's name-maker in knits, has glamorized his knit evening designs with lace for fall. "I treat knits as a fabric," Adolfo said last week at Saks Fifth Avenue, Troy, explaining the pairing. "Lace with other fabrics looks old-fashioned. With knits, it's contemporary." As a consequence, lace opens airily into dramatic sleeves falling from the shoulders of a simple knitted evening design. It also provides a gauzed expense of shoulder and forearm by sweeping down from the haltered neckline of a short cocktail dress. Adolfo's more subtle touches include inserting triangles of lace into flared hemlines and framing the tibeat with lace etchings. The traditionally feminine accent is updated on the uncomplicated designs and informal mood of the knits. Some added glamour is tossed into the understated approach to nighttime through a close-fitting, lace brimmed hat.
