money in a silk jersey that can be worn 35 different ways.

Starting with a basic shape the body of the gown leads into two long trails of fabric. The trails wrap up, around, down, criss-cross or do just about anything the imaginative wearer wants. And every time the dress is re-wrapped it is also renewed.

Of course, di Sant Angelo wasn't the only focus of the show.

IN LOWER PRICE ranges but equally exciting were designs from Halston, Klein, Givenchy, St. Laurent and others.

Klein's man-tailored design was a crowd-pleaser in a camel sweater set, straight-legged pants, white shirt and tie.

And Anne Klein's big look added sophistication to the voluminous style with a snake skin blouse and cream colored gored skirt.

There was also emphasis placed the monochromatic color schemes. Entire ensembles in cadet green, navy blue, luxurious burgundy and pale grey — completed the one-color look.
