The New Road Law
 State Highway Commissioner Ely is having a busy time of it in constructing the township highway commissioners in regard to the new road law. According to Mr. Ely fully 60 per cent of the highway commissioners in the different townships of the state are newly elected and most of them are farmers and unfamiliar with the road laws and with the new revised road law, which will go into effect in September, it keeps him busy instructing them.
 The new revised law was compiled at great pains by the joint committee on roads and bridges from the senate and house and there are also a great many features in the new law upon which the highway commissioner should be commended. Commissioner Ely is having the law printed in a condensed form which will be mailed to the supervisors.

NEGLECT THE RIVER ROUTES
 Write in Everybody's Magazine Calls Attention to What He Considers a Mistake.
 There lies St. Paul within a ton-mile freight haul of the Minneapolis flour mills, which send 7,000,000 barrels of flour to Europe every year—and not a barrel of it goes down the grand old avenue to New Orleans and away by the gulf, says a writer in Everybody's. And there is Minneapolis herself—with nearly a larger store of wheat to draw upon, and English millers competition growing keener every year—only ten miles away from an unbroken river channel. But never a cent is spent to bridge that ton-mile and increase the city's prosperity by pure flour sent over the channel to the rich cotton fields of Georgia and South Carolina, running from this land of bolts and factories to the greatest of our cotton ports and carrying scarcely a bale of goods or a bale of cotton down to export. And there is the Ohio, bargeful of its wonderful coal fleets, which might be run for half their cost and with greater safety—the Ohio, bearing a few cracking, dirty pockets so old that in Maine they would be called "old he ones," meandering along the bank, picking up freight out of the mud of the shore and dumping pure fish into the water, and the Mississippi, absolute unprofitable for anything like modern traffic.

Can Evade Law.
 Legal option in Oakland and other counties in the state often works out in a curious manner, but perhaps the most peculiar experience of all is encountered by railroad companies running lines through the state. Liquor is dispensed at all buffet cars and before local option was introduced it could be purchased by passengers at any time they so desired. Now the sale of liquor on trains is limited to wet counties. When the train is passing through wet territory the passengers may buy as much as they wish, but when the train gets over the boundary into a dry county there is not a drop to be had.
 The difficulty is, however, side-stepped in the following manner, which makes it easy for one who knows the rope to quench his thirst whenever he sees it. Upon entering the car, if it happens to be in wet territory, the passenger buys as much liquor as he thinks he will drink on the trip. Having paid for the same he has it brought to him whenever he wants it, no matter if the train happens to be in dry territory at the time. —Pontiac Press Gazette.

MADE RECORD HARD TO BEAT
 Truthful Yarn That Ended Dispute as to Quickness of Companies in Paying Claims.
 A prominent life insurance agent in a western city tells about an argument two rural representatives of insurance companies had recently. They were talking over the telephone in county court day, and were being listened to by a considerable number of farmers and others. One of the agents declared that his company had established a record for the quick payment of death claims. As evidence of this fact he said that not long before a policyholder had died and his widow had been given a check, covering the amount of the policy, within the funeral was in progress. "That's nothing," quickly responded the other. "Our company has its office in a twenty-story building in New York. It is on the tenth floor. The other day a man inquired with us from the twentieth floor, and our officers, recognizing that he was a lead-user, handed him a check as he passed our window." The farmers gave the verdict to the last speaker.

He Did Not Like the Tune.
 A poor foreman musician was doggedly wrestling with his trombone outside a village inn. He knew that "The Last Chord" was somewhere in that instrument, but the latter seemed loath to part with it. At length the landlord appeared at the door. The poor musician bowed, and, holding his car, said, "Musik hath here," and smiled.
 The innkeeper smiled also, and staidly
 "Well, not always," he said; "but try that tune outside that red brick house and I'll give you sixpence."
 Three minutes later the trombonist was back again, mud bespattered and forlorn.
 "You was right," he said, slowly and sadly, "musik hath harms not always, and a man will not get that house came and me mit a brige he knocked down—yes. He not like that tune—no, no," and he rubbed the back of his head.
 "I thought he wouldn't," said the landlord; "he's just done a month's hard labor for stealing a clothesline from a back garden." —Dundee Advertiser.

A Long Bamboo.
 An Englishman was once railing a native of India upon his faculty in lying. The native at once replied: "Why, sahib, we are all more or less liars in my country, and if one tells a story another immediately tops it. There were two young men of my country who had a boating match, and one said, 'My father is so rich and has so many horses that his stable is of such extent as to take a horse 11 months to go from one end to the other.' 'Shahash, brother,' replied the second boater, 'that is very good. My father has a bamboo so long that he can step the whole way with it when he observes the sun in harvest time.' 'Hi hi!' exclaimed the first. 'That is very wonderful; but, pray, brother, where does your father keep such a long bamboo?' 'Why, you stupid,' was the answer, 'in your father's stable, to be sure.'"

Alumnae Associations.
 The Wesleyan alumnae is the oldest organization of the kind in the world, and recently Mrs. Emma Kunz was made the president of it. The alumnae organizations take most active interest in the colleges and schools from which they have been graduated. At the Smith commencement the alumnae march almost outranked the Ivy procession in importance.
Wedding Ring Etiquette.
 "What is the etiquette of the wedding ring?" they asked the little green widow. "Do you wear the rings given by all your husbands, or that of the last one only? I see you don't wear any!"
 "You wear the ring of the husband who pays you alimony," said she. "That's why I am ringless."
