Setting a beautiful table, contemporary style, doesn't mean sticking to only black and white table linens and starkly "modern" looks in flatware.

Several all new, elegant patterns have emerged recently for the table-setter who likes to feel contemporary, yet have some humor in the dining room.

The price of silver precludes having a set for 12 on every table, so stainless steel is filling the gap nicely and in a way which is making it almost more acceptable by contemporary value standards.

A new twist in the flatware department is the use of aluminum as a casting material. A new pattern called "Corvus" is a handsome addition to the already hundreds of stainless patterns available.
