11 year old wants work

The recession has hit the 11 year old set according to a young Girl Scout who says that baby sitting jobs don't seem to be too plentiful anymore.

Rose Finery, 30530 Springland Drive, wrote a letter to the Farmington Observer & Eccentric this week stating she was an experienced baby sitting for work.

"I'm the little one (in a family of five children) and everybody works but me," stated the sixth grader at Beechview School.

Rose got her baby sitting experience by sitting for Michelle Davis, a soon to be one year old who lives next door.

She still takes care of Michelle when the family needs her, "but they don't seem to need me much anymore and some of my friends are not sitting as much as they used to either," she said.

Rose is saving for a trip to Ireland to see her grandmother. "I only saw her once and that was four years ago so I can hardly remember her," she said.

In addition to her Girl Scout activities, with Troop No. 88, Rose serves as a Safety Girl for her school. "So call me after 5 p.m.," she said.

Keeney-Sundquist FUNERAL HOME

Dear Friends,
In arranging a funeral, the family should realize that added costs include newspaper notices, transportation fees, automobile rentals, musicians, cemetery crematory or mausoleum fees - these items alone can exceed the funeral director's total bill. Keeping this in mind, the total expenditure should not exceed the family's ability to pay.
