Pastor discusses economy and how to cope

A not too dull, not too pertinent short sermon on Sunday and com-forting words during times of trouble, is that the role of a clergy-man?

"We can do so much more than just come along after the fact and pick up the pieces," the Rev. Wil-liam Brewster, associate rector at Christ Church Cranbrook in Bloomfield Hills, said. "We are a source of help during and even be-fore a crisis."

In November, Mr. Brewster he-gan putting news items from the media together to form a picture that he felt spelled "crisis" for and attenuance is still growing.

"During the every-member canvass we found several members who had been laid off and others in the brokerage and real estate fields whose earnings had been lowered by the current situation," Mr. Brewster said, "We knew that people who had never experienced this kind of employment crisis before were being affected."

lic class Sunday, John Tower, pro-fessor of economics at Oakland University, will continue the dis-cussion on policies and their effect on the individual.

The following two Sundays, Warren Kruger will discuss "Prospects for the Long Pull, Natural Resources, Environment and Affluence" and "Living with the No Growth or Low Growth Economy."

DRUGER, WHO recently gave up a lucrative position with an established firm to form his own consulting company, and a panel of experts will discuss positive results of being laid off.

"Kruger wants to establish that there is a positive element in the situation," Mrs. Brewster said.

"Sometimes being laid off and out of work forces a person to change
and the change is often better."

The purpose of the series is not only to help those people who are experiencing a career crisis but to give people who are not, the tools with which they can help their neighbors in need.

Mrs. Brewster said the two most often expressed questions are, "Is the recession going to get worse and will it cut deeper?" and "Is it going to affect me more than it is inch town?"

TOWER BELIEVES that De-troit has reached the bottom of the downward spiral. A native Detro-iter who lives in Highland Park and is an advisor to Detroit Mayor Coleman Young. Tower has what Brewster calls "a sense of reality about the situation."

Anticipating that the last two programs in the series will prove popular, Mrs. Brewster has sched-uled them for the lead-off spot in the five-week Lenten series which will begin Feb. 16.

Tower will be the speaker for
