

Students find vocations with assist from VIEW

The Farmington Area YMCA is offering a special course for high school juniors, seniors, recent graduates, veterans, and non-graduates with an opportunity to explore career and educational options. The course is called "vocational interest exploration workshop" (VIEW).

It is a comprehensive five week workshop conducted on consecutive Saturdays, in which participants will identify their existing and potential abilities and interests.

VIEW also incorporates an introduction to the process of decision-making involved in vocational and educational choice, and provides a learning model that can be applied to personal planning in the constantly changing world of career choice.

THE WORKSHOP will be offered at the Lutheran Church of the Incorporation, 3033 Ten Mile Road in Farmington Hills. The church is on Ten Mile Road between Middlebelt and Inland roads. Registration should be made ahead of time at the YMCA, but the course itself will begin on Saturday, Jan. 25 with pre-workshop activities from 8:30 a.m.-12:30 p.m. The session at the church will be a vocational and educational testing session. The workshop itself will begin on Feb. 22 and run for five Saturdays.

FRED LINDHOLM, the YMCA community program director, said any young adult who was unclear about his or her vocation will be helped by this workshop.

He said "the cost of the VIEW workshop would be very quickly regained by the elimination of any unnecessary college courses or any misdirected job experiences. With the price of just one college class today, this course is a bargain."

He encourages anyone to call him at the Farmington YMCA for further information.

The leaders of the VIEW workshop are three professional counselors: Neil Austin, Lawrence Gage, and James Gural.

Cost is $70 for one person or $125 for two persons who register together. Registration may be made at the Farmington YMCA.
