

Getting Around

By ETHEL SIMMONS

The Atrium, popular Bingham Farms restaurant, celebrated the season with a private Welcome to Glorious Spring Party April 2. If you've already forgotten, that was the night of the Glorious Ice Storm. But it was a cozy contrast to be inside the Atrium, with cocktails and hors d'oeuvres, looking out at the snow-covered trees in the open courtyard.

Everyone in the back room left happy, too, with a small green plant to grow. Some guests wandered out to Bobbies Pub, which adjoins the Atrium. That's another gathering spot that draws a big crowd.

Atrium welcomes spring

Last show in the series "For the Man in Your Life," while not for travelers in particular, showed how to get it all together with the newest looks. Wardrobe basics start with a suit, a navy blazer, grey slacks, it was pointed out. And that can get you from here to almost anywhere.

BREAKFAST AT Southfield's Michigan Inn recently on textured vegetable protein with no cholesterol and no animal fat. If that doesn't sound too exciting, well, it was in that these were new food offerings designed for people who variously want to follow a low-cholesterol diet, avoid meat because of health or ecological reasons or stay away from pork products and remain Kosher.

We sampled breakfast patties, breakfast links and breakfast slices. These seemed to be general agreement that the patties tasted best.

They had that pork sausage flavor, although spicier, than you're used to. The links just didn't have the solid texture, and the slices resembling ham weren't even close to the real thing, cutting almost like paper.

REMINDS YOU how much our taste is influenced by appearance and other factors.

Helen Wolcott Horton, consultant for Morningstar Farms, pointed out, "These are not fake anything. They contain some spices and seasonings but protein and vegetable oils are used instead of animal fats."

The products include protein, vitamin and iron to equal their fresh meat counterpart, she said.

They should be fried in oil, in order to brown, and need only five to six minutes of cooking. The brown 'n' serve products are found in the frozen breakfast section of grocery stores, along with waffles.
