LIT receives Kresge grant

The Kresge Foundation has approved a grant of $50,000 toward the renovation of offices for the School of Engineering at the Lawrence Institute of Technology.

The funds will be used to modernize and increase the number of school of Engineering offices. The renovation will include air-conditioning and allow consolidation of the engineering offices with the office of Dr. Stephen R. Davis, Dean of Engineering, which has been in another campus building because of space shortage.

"We are very grateful to the Kresge Foundation," said LIT President Dr. Wayne H. Buell. "For making possible the new office complex which will encourage more interaction between students and faculty as well as provide the facilities for counseling prospective students and parents."

"The consolidation of offices also will encourage faculty members of exchange ideas and unify the effort in the development of advanced education programs."

With more than 1,300 students, the School of Engineering is the largest of LIT's five schools and one of the largest in the U.S. A 10 per cent increase in enrollment is expected this fall. LIT's total 1974-75 enrollment was 4,308 men and women.

Previously, the Kresge Foundation contributed $25,000 toward the purchase of equipment for the LIT college dining room.

Bug killers may be banned

Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) action may ban chlordane and heptachlor, pesticides widely used in farms and homes, leaving no effective registered replacement for consumer use.

"Chlordane is the only registered pesticide available for protection from vegetable wireworms and white grubs. It is used on spiders, gnats and millipedes in the home," says Dr. Donald Cress, Michigan State University extension entomologist.

The EPA is holding hearings to determine if the pesticide causes any imminent danger to human life. During the hearings it is legal to manufacture, distribute, sell, buy or use chlordane according to the manufacturers' instructions.

"Chlordane is also used to prevent damage to turf grass and home lawns. There is no registered replacement for many of its uses," he says.

Small business course planned

Bruce E. Selik, president of Hillside Furniture Galleries, Inc., and a Southfield resident, will teach a course on starting and operating a small business at 7 p.m., Thursday, Sept. 4, for 15 weeks at the Orchard Ridge campus of Oakland Community College.

Topics will include selecting the type of business; legal and financial structure; establishing a new business; managing and marketing a business; selecting employees and financial analysis.

Enrollment, limited to 25 persons, will be during the regular registration period at the campus beginning Sept. 2.

Patricia Seraydarian takes state position

Patricia Seraydarian of 1898 University Park Drive, Livonia, has begun her new job as occupational office and distributive education specialist with the post-secondary unit of the vocational-technical education service of the Michigan Department of Education.
