stitch. Its foil ground adds a reflective note. The paper is also used to cover the fold-back window screens.

A large square dining table in black wood is surrounded by eight chrome and cane classic chairs.

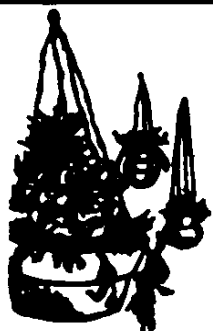

Mrs. Trabue's bedroom is another good example of a room filled with furnishings which worked in the former house and which work especially well in the new house.

They include a brass bedstead flanked by two campaign chests and an unusual pair of faux bamboo Chippendale side chairs.

Brown and white are the predominant colors in the room, but other color accents appear in the multi-hued Oriental rug, plants and art.

So moving can be a moving experience when using furnishings from a former abode. New backgrounds and window treatments, as shown in Mrs. Trabue's home, can change the look of the furnishings completely to help make a new 'home' with a fresh new look.
