tern is stunning. Striped velvet chairs surround the table.

The kitchen is completed in a deep color which Mrs. Biarnes said she'd probably have done the whole house in, if left up to her. It is dark brown and white.

Its decor is a complete contrast to that of the rest of the house. Strictly contemporary, it sports a foil background wallpaper which gives the room a lighter feeling than it once had. All the walls and the ceiling are covered in the fret-work pattern.

Mirrors flank the sides of the cupboards by the sink, act as a backsplash and surround the stove to expand the room's dimensions.

A hall closet adjacent to the kitchen was eliminated and in its place is a chic glass table used for dinner for two, a meal planning center or as a passthrough for cocktail parties.

A narrow slatted metal blind covers the area when it is not being used for parties.

Biarnes said the things which bother him most as a designer are 'Ladies who come to me and tell me they want a house that's exactly the same as Mrs. so-and-so's down the street.'

'That is the worst thing you can do to a designer. I must have my freedom in order to do the kind of interesting job a client should be looking for in a designer,' he said. 'Otherwise, they should be able to look in magazines and duplicate what they see themselves,' he admonished.

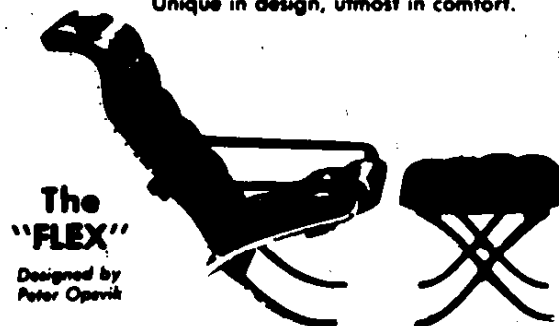

If he ever really gets disgusted with the ladies who just want copy jobs he can go back to his original profession—electrical engineering, but for now he said he likes his new field.

'It allows me the freedom to express myself that engineering doesn't,' he said.

If his home is any example, his self-expression is something well worth seeing.
